

STEVE WESTLY

California State Controller

State Controller Steve Westly is currently accepting applications for student interns for: Summer, 2005.

State Controller Steve Westly's office is currently seeking mature, motivated, and enthusiastic students for internships in his Sacramento Executive Office.

What does the State Controller do?

A statewide elected official, the Controller serves as California's Chief Financial Officer. In addition to managing the state's checkbook, the Controller serves on a variety of boards and commissions, influencing policy on the economy, the environment, education and labor.

Who is Steve Westly?

Before being elected State Controller in 2002, Westly held a variety of positions in the private and public sectors, most notably as one of the early executives at eBay, the online auction house. He has also served on the faculty at Stanford's Graduate School of Business.

What do interns do?

Interns will work in the Executive Office in Sacramento, and have an opportunity to interact with Deputy Controllers on a variety of current issues. Assignments will include, but are not limited to, research, letters to constituents, and staffing the Controller (attending meetings, events, etc.). Other special projects would vary based on the intern's skills, experience and interests.

Interns receive an outstanding opportunity to engage fully in state government and immerse themselves in the issues of the day. We will go out of our way to team interns with the staff members most likely to serve as effective mentors.

Qualifications: Interest in government, public policy, and current events; ability to work well in a team-oriented, fast-paced environment; enthusiastic attitude for any task; attention to detail; excellent writing and proofreading skills; ability to navigate the Internet.

The positions are non-paid and can be tailored to the intern's class schedule. In the past, we've had interns work as few as 12 hours a week, and as many as 40.

We look forward to hearing from you!
